Rutgers Family Jujitsu Classes

Children's Class - Wednesdays 5:30-7:00pm

Teens and Adults - Wednesdays 7:00-9:00pm

The Edison Senior Citizen Center, 2963 Woodbridge Avenue, Edison

Children's Classes are open to children age 7 through 12; Teens through Adults for the Adult Classes. Participants will be divided appropriately by age and learn how to escape from various holds, hold an opponent on the ground, fall safely, and throw an attacker. They will also take turns leading exercises, giving them the opportunity to grow in their leadership abilities and in self-confidence. Both Children and Adults will work toward promotions in Danzan Ryu Jujitsu as extended members of Rutgers Jujitsu.

Barbara Gessner, 7th degree Professor of Jujitsu and 5th degree Black Belt in Judo, has been teaching Judo & Jujitsu for 45 years, 39 of those at Rutgers University. Black Belt Instructors and members of Rutgers Kodenkan Jujitsu Club assist Professor Gessner with instruction. All instructors have undergone background checks and are experienced in working with children through adults.

Fee for instruction is $50 per month. Two members of the same family are $90 per month. Three members of the same family are $125 per month. Classes will run continuously throughout the Year.

Enrollment will include registration with a national Jujitsu Organization. Children & Teens will also receive their own uniforms. (Adult participants will need to purchase their own at a cost of about $35)

Danzan Ryu Jujitsu is an effective system of non-aggressive self-defense that incorporates physical and mental training within a philosophy of ethical and moral development. The arts are taken from Judo, Kempo and other Japanese martial arts as well as Hawaiian Lua.
